Integrative Medicine

Great Smokies Medical Center, Inc. was founded in 1979 to integrate mainstream and alternative medicine's strengths with the goal of helping patients improve and maintain optimal health and function. Services offered include medical evaluation and treatment of a wide variety of health concerns, nutritional and toxicity evaluations, hormone balancing for men and women, breast thermography, IV nutritional therapies and more.

Cynthia J. Libert, MD, ABFM was among the first U.S. physicians to train in the prevention and reversal of symptoms of Alzheimer's disease with internationally-recognized expert in neurodegenerative diseases, Dale Bredesen, MD, Duke University Medical School graduate and NIH Postdoctoral Fellow who has held faculty positions at UCSF and UCLA. Until recently, there was no truly effective treatment for Alzheimer's disease. Now, Dr. Libert brings hope to those who have a family history of Alzheimer's disease and hope for reversal of symptoms to those who struggle with mild cognitive impairment or early stages of Alzheimer's disease. Dr. Libert is currently accepting new patients.
